

IRVINE, WILLIAM C.

February 6, 1861-June 14, 1948

The late "Razor Bill" Irvine who left an estate estimated at one quarter million dollar, left the greater portion of his life's earnings for the construction and maintenance of an old men's home to be built in Wheatland.

Mr. Irvine specified in his will that his son, Eugene, should receive his bank stock and the rest of the quarter million dollar estate for the construction and maintenance of a home for worthy and needy men, preferably older men.

Ben D. Cossman, James D. Chaplin, Orvel Bridgmon, and Oscar Natwick were named as trustees to invest his money in sound investments and use as much as necessary for the construction and maintenance of the home. The above named trustees or their successors are to maintain the home for a period of 95 years at which time they are to have used the entire sum in the maintenance of the proposed home.